Macallan's Eden Algie Makes Drinking Scotch Fun

Last week Angelenos by the hundreds went to the "Celebrate the Macallan" at Vibiana. These scotch drinkers jumped at the chance to sample some single malt and learn about the history, traditions, and origins of one of Scotland's finest.

No longer just the drink of old men after a game of golf at a fancy country club, more and more people are discovering that they enjoy drinking single malt scotch. Macallan Ambassador Eden Algie wants to make sure everyone know that there are no rules (except please don't pour cola to a shot of 25). Algie's "Celebrate the Macallan" presentation was full of images of Scotland, jokes about England, and plenty of encouragement and humor. According to Algie there is no exclusive club and no reason to be intimidated.

The evening at the beautiful Vibiana also included a demonstration of the Macallan ice ball machine, tastings of the 12, 15, 17, and 18-year-old Macallan, and many laughs.
